

World's biggest companies face USD 1 trillion in climate change risks

More than 200 of the world's largest listed companies have forecast that climate change could cost them a combined total of almost USD 1 trillion over the next five years. Climate change, experts argue, can also bring opportunities to businesses however, with pharmaceutical companies like Eli Lilly and Bayer, for example, expecting a rise in infectious diseases, which will increase demand for their products.