

Twice-yearly jab could transform lives of high cholesterol sufferers

A twice-yearly injection which replaces daily statins could be a game-changer for millions of people with high cholesterol, The Medicines Company revealed. A landmark study of 1,600 people over 18 months found that the injection halved the levels of bad cholesterol in the blood without any apparent side effects.