

Lethal medications: Pharmacies ignoring Zantac recall

Despite the health ministry's warning against Zantac, some pharmacies have ignored the recall decision. Separately, the US government filed a lawsuit last May accusing Teva Pharmaceuticals of orchestrating a sweeping scheme with 19 other drug companies to inflate drug prices by more than 1,000% and stifle competition for generic drugs. With Teva at the center of the conspiracy, the drug companies, including Sandoz, are said to have colluded to significantly raise prices on 86 medicines between July 2013 and January 2015, according to the complaint.
