

Court orders Health Insurance Organization to lift treatment cost limits

The Supreme Administrative Court has ordered the Health Insurance Organization to repay all out-of-pocket costs to patients, without setting any spending limits. The court indicated that it is not within the organization's scope of work or authority to determine how much patients should receive.