

New bill seeks to cut companies' contribution to universal healthcare system from taxes

Parliamentary budget and health committees will discuss a new bill that aims to deduct private businesses' contribution to the universal healthcare system from income taxes. The current law stipulates that companies should contribute 0.25% of their annual revenues to the universal healthcare system.