

Finance ministry to issue rules concerning universal healthcare system contributions this week

The finance ministry will issue the rules for applying the private businesses' contribution to the universal healthcare system this week. The finance and health ministries had promised to amend the health insurance law after many companies called for the deduction of the contribution from their taxes, not their total revenues. Government sources said the value would be capped at a specific amount of net profit.