

New drug for patients with chronic heart failure

A new drug called Entresto is recommended for chronic heart failure patients with an ejection fraction of less than 40%, according to a cardiology professor at Menofia University.