

Campaign for detecting pregnancy-transmitted diseases to be launched early 2020

The Ministry of Health will launch a new campaign which aims to detect diseases that are passed from mother to fetus during the early stages of pregnancy. The campaign, set to kick off early 2020, will offer free treatment to patients.