

Health minister: Universal healthcare system is compulsory, covers all population

Egypt's healthcare system faces many challenges such as the different services it offers and the varied funding systems it will rely on, according to the health minister. She noted that the universal healthcare system is compulsory and covers the entire population, with the end goal of providing improved access to health services, financial risk protection, and improved health outcomes.