Universal healthcare system to be fully computerized

A tech company hired by the health ministry will start computerizing the universal healthcare system in Port Said. The beta version of the data management system will debut late August, to be officially launched next September.