

MoH looks into digitizing universal healthcare system

The ministers of health and communications have discussed digitizing the universal healthcare system - which is set to debut in Port Said next July - by using computer-based medical records and creating an online network for all healthcare facilities taking part in the new scheme.