

352 million people at high risk of developing diabetes

According to the International Diabetes Federation, 425 million people were living with diabetes in 2017. Another 352 million people were estimated to be at high risk of developing type 2 diabetes in 2017. It indicated that lifestyle modification with physical activity and a healthy diet could delay or prevent the onset of type 2 diabetes.