Universal healthcare system to have digital patient records

Egyptian tech companies are developing digital patient records to be used within the universal healthcare system. The computer-based records will help improve patient care via more accurate diagnoses and treatments.