

Tirofiban improves coronary artery blood flow

The antiplatelet drug tirofiban can improve coronary artery blood flow in diabetes patients with acute myocardial infarction after 30 days of primary catheterization, a researcher from the Menofia University has found.